

Savoring the Memories of Your Mexico Vacation

Contributed by George
Saturday, 30 September 2006

When taking a vacation, whether that vacation is in Mexico or not, a camera may be one of the first things that you pack. A camera is one of the best ways to cherish and forever remember your Mexico vacation. When selecting a camera to take along with you on your trip, you will want to keep your vacation activities and destinations in mind. This is important to select the right camera. If you are unable to afford to cost of a camera, you may be able to take pictures with your cell phone. Camera phones are popular all around the world. In addition to keeping your vacation pictures on your phone, you can easily email them to friends and family or you can transfer the picture to your computer. The quality of camera phone pictures may not be the best, but it is better than not taking pictures at all.

Aside from digital cameras, disposable cameras are the most popular among travelers. Disposable cameras work like all other traditional cameras. The only difference is that you will not get the camera back once your pictures are developed. If you are interested in keeping your vacation photographs on your computer or you prefer digital pictures, most photo centers will transfer your photographs onto a CD. If you do not already have a camcorder, you will need to buy one. As DVDs are increasing in popularity, the popularity of VHS tapes is slowing beginning to decline. If you are looking for cheap camcorders, you may be able to find VHS tape recorders for a low price at most retail stores. Video footage is often better on a DVD than on a VHS tape. If you are able to afford the latest camcorder models, you are encouraged to consider purchasing one.